

2013 KALLESKE ROSINA ROSÉ

94 POINTS

"Wow. Try this for size: a base of '40s grenache, plus some shiraz and a dash of viognier picked over a 3-week period from mid Feb-early Mar; crushed grapes 2-24 hours skin contact; wild-fermented in tank or barrel; 3 months lees contact. The result is a notably juicy rosé with a long, lingering, savoury finish".

GREAT-VALUE WINES

"The Kalleske family have three biodynamic beauties from the 2013 vintage already out, all selling for $19 or so a bottle. There's the seriously complex and savoury Florentine Chenin Blanc, the bouncy, slurpy, Clarry's GSM a blend of Grenache, Shiraz and Mourvèdre, and this beautiful, full-flavoured rosé. It's bursting with vibrant red fruit and flowers, but it's not all raspberry cordial, like so many other Barossa pink wines, there's some grip and grunt and a welcome savoury twist, too".

"Barossa grenache, with small dashes of shiraz and Viognier, produced this rosé from the biodynamic vineyard of the Kalleske family. The Kalleskes have been growing grapes at Greenock for more than 100 years and their Grenache wines are up to 70 years old. This 2013 wine is watermelon pink and has scents of bouquet gami and loganberries. Juicy raspberry flavour comes through on the front of the palate. The finish has steely acid... It is named after Anna Rosina Kalleske, who farmed the Barossa Valley family property with her husband, Karl Heinrich 'Eduard' Kalleske, from 1853 to the 1800s".

"A vibrant watermelon colour in the bottle... An enticingly perfumed wine of raspberry and musk,... rich, juicy strawberry and cherry qualities. The sweetness lingers enjoyably and the viognier adds some complexity, while the shiraz provides a hint of peppery spice".
